CHAPTER 10

Bail and Recognizance

It must be understood that for every bailable offence bail a right not a favour. In demanding bail from an accused person, Magistrates should bear in mind the social status of the accused and fix the amount of bail accordingly, care being taken that the amount so fixed is not excessive. The amount of bail and the offence charged, with the section under which it is punishable, should always be stated on the face of an order directing the accused to be detained in the lock-up in default of his furnishing bail. Bail may be tendered and must be accepted at any time before conviction.

Principles governing great of bail.

Bail may also be tendered and accepted even after conviction in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2-A) of Section 426 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, when a person other than a person convicted of a nonbailable offence satisfies the court that he intends to file an appeal.

2. When any person other than a person accused of a Recognization non-bailable offence is brought before a Criminal Court, the Court may, if it thinks fit, instead pf taking bai, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance (section 496 Criminal Procedure Code).

3. Even in the case of non-bailable offence there are circumstances under which the accused may be admitted bailable to bail. These are described in Section 497 of the Code. Sub-section (3-A) has been inserted by the Amendment Act No. 26 of 1955 and provides that if the trial has not been concluded within sixty days of the first date fixed for evidence in the case and the accused person has been in custody during the whole of the said period, he shall be released on bail, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing the magistrate directs otherwise.

4. Under section 513 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a deposit of cash or Government promissory notes may be made in lieu of bail, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour.

Government promissory may be accepted in lieu of Bail to be granted promptly.

Release on bail by superior Court.

Bail applications on holidays.

Disposal of bail applications in the absence of Sessions Judge.

Inquiry about sufficiency of bonds

5. It is a hardship to detain parties under trial in prison an hour longer than the law requires. They are prejudiced in their means of defence, if respectable and thev are exposed the to indignity imprisonment, for subsequent of which no order discharge or acquittal can atone.

- 6. Under section 498 of the Code, the Sessions Judges may, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not, direct that any accused person be admitted to bail, or that the bail required by a Police Officer or Magistrate be reduced. The Sessions Judge may, similarly, cause any person who has been admitted to bail by him to be arrested and may commit him to custody as provided in sub-section (2). Section 438 enables a Court of Sessions or District Magistrate in referring a case to the High Court, if it is recommended that the sentence be reversed, to direct that the person under sentence be admitted to bail. It should also be remembered that, under section 426 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; an Appellate Court may; for reasons to be recorded in writing, order that the convicted persons be released on bail or on his own bond.
- 7. Sessions Judges should allow urgent applications for bail to be presented to them at their residence on holidays at a fixed hour, such applications cannot be presented in court on a working day owing to unavoidable circumstances.
- 8. When Sessions Judges are unavoidably absent from the station, they should take action under section 17(4), Criminal Procedure Code for the hearing of urgent bail application.
- 9. Considerable diversity of practice exists in carrying out the provisions of the law in regard to the taking of bonds from accused persons and their sureties, and the result of the diversity is not only to cause Police officers to be employed in needless inquiries, but also to keep the accused person in custody pending the result of the inquiry into the sufficiency or otherwise of the bail offered. Sub-section (3) of Section 499 now enables the court to accept affidavits for the purpose of determining whether the sureties are sufficient or not. At the same time, however, it is the duty of Magistrates to satisfy themselves that the sureties are,in point of substance, persons of whom it may reasonably be presumed that they can, if necessary, satisfy the terms of the bail-bond.

- 10. Section 514 of the Code lays down the procedure to be adopted to compel payment of the penalty mentioned in the bond from the person executing the personal recognizance and from his sureties.
- 11. When a person is enlarged on bail by order of the High Court, or when bail is to be taken for his appearance before the High Court, the bonds to be executed by such person and his sureties shall be in the following forms which have been prescribed by the High Court with the sanction of the State Government, under powers conferred by section 554 (2) of Code of Criminal Procedure.

(3) Except in very special cases, the Judges of the High Court decline to entertain applications for bail unless the Sessions Judge or the Court trying the case has already been applied to and has rejected application. Sessions Judges should conform to this practice.

Vol. III. 5 Ch. 10.

- 15. All applications for bail in criminal cases including appeals should be treated as urgent.
- 16. It is irregular for criminal courts to forward original bail applications presented to the Court and other documents connected therewith to the Prosecuting Agency for report. If and when it is considered desirable to issue notice to the Prosecuting Agency, a definite date should be fixed for the hearing of the bail application, so that all concerned may have due notice.

Bail application to be treated an urgent.
